Dear comrades from The City of San Diego:

It is with a heavy heart I return the attached parking violation, erroneously levied upon our Dear Leader, His Excellency, Randy Williams, The Sultan and Supreme Leader of The Republic of Slowjamastan.

His Excellency was visiting San Diego, California, United States of America on a diplomatic mission, which included a brief stop at your esteemed "San Diego International Airport."

Though The Sultan did, in fact, step out of his vehicle, it was for a mere 90 seconds, solely to assist a handicapped lady with her luggage. Let it be known that His Excellency was traveling in a diplomatic vehicle, no less.

To summarize

1. Our Sultan's feet did not touch the ground for longer than 90 seconds.
2. Our Sultan momentarily departed the vehicle to assist a disadvantaged American citizen.
3. The vehicle in question belonged to the esteemed Republic of Slowjamastan, proudly displaying diplomatic plates.
4. The term "driver fled" is patently false, as no interaction occurred between the driver (our Sultan) and any airport personnel.
5. Failure to swiftly dismiss this citation will undoubtedly strain relations between Slowjamastan and the United States. And who wants to be responsible for that?

Please see the attached sworn affidavit from driver, The Sultan.

Upon careful consideration of the facts surrounding this regrettable incident and the evident miscommunication, we trust you will concur that this citation was issued in error, ought to be retracted, and never mentioned again.

We extend our gratitude for promptly rectifying this matter and send warm regards from The Republic of Slowjamastan. Also, no need to reprimand Officer Gonzalez, instead, we can use this as a teachable moment.

Strong hug,

Bob Dobalina

Director of Security for The Sultan

AFFIDAVIT

I, His Excellency, Randy "R Dub!" Williams, The Sultan of Slowjamastan, having been first duly sworn, provide this Affidavit in support of myself and state the following:

1. Let it be proclaimed from the mountaintops: I, The Sultan, did not abandon my chariot for longer than a mere 90 seconds. Yet alas, I am aware of the American decree forbidding any momentary separation from one's vehicle at the airport. Fear not, for my hasty departure and return were solely to lend aid to a damsel in distress, burdened with luggage of considerable weight.
2. As for the accusation of "fleeing," I must set the record straight. Nay, there was no fleeing, only a leisurely stroll back to my conveyance, reminiscent of the legendary Richard Roundtree in his portrayal of Shaft.
3. Behold the chariot in question, proudly bearing the insignia of The Republic of Slowjamastan and adorned with diplomatic plates, a beacon of sovereignty amidst the chaos of airport bureaucracy. Surely, the sacred texts of the Vienna Conventions on Diplomatic and Consular Relations decree that I am entitled to due rights and privileges.
4. I concur with my esteemed colleague, Bob, that it would be most unwise to escalate this matter into an "international incident" due to the blunder of a fledgling member of your esteemed team. (A nod of sympathy to Officer J. Gonzalez, whose intentions, though misguided, were surely pure.)
5. Cross my heart, hope to die, stick a needle in my eye. If I'm lyin' I'm dyin.'
